Delane, of the London Times.

Deriving from nature large gifts, and by circumstance clothed with vast means of acting upon the volitions of men, and sometimes even ruling events, Delane, as may well be supposed, did not show the real eagerness of his nature in the weak, bustling way of people reckened for nothing, whose time is of scarce any worth; and, indeed, he had the outward composure, the air of power not yet put forth that becomes s strong man of action; but it could always be seen that his energies were rather compressed than lulled -that the farnsce, if so one may speak, had its fires "banked up" in the daytime, yet still was always aglow, always ready to blaze into action an hour or two before midnight. When already in his carriage and moving to the scene of his midnight labors, kind nature used to grant him some minutes of sleep, upon which, because giving fresh strength, he used to see a great value; but from the moment of his entering the editor's room until 4 or 5 o'clock in the morning, the strain he had to put on his faculties must have been always great, and in stirring times almost prodigious; for although of course the great bulk of the manifold work required for constructing a number of the Times was performed by subordinates, and although it rested with others-perhaps I might say with one other-to determine what, at least for a while, should be the chosen policy of the j areal, its editor had to execute the general design; and these were the hours of night when often he had to decide-to decide, of course, with great swiftness-between two or more courses of action vasily different; when, besides, he must judge the appeals brought up to the paramount arbiter from all kinds of men, from all sorts of earthly tribunals; when dispatches of moment, when telegrams fraught even much toil could supply. TAKING OFF THE SHOES, -In Syria people never take off their caps or turbans when entering a house or visiting a friend, but they always leave their shees at the door. The reason is that their floors are covered with clean mate and rugs, and in the Moslem houses the men kneel on the rugs to pray, and press their foreheads to the floor, so that it would not be decent or respectful to walk in with dirty shoes and soil the sijady on which they knoll to pray. They have no foot mat or sorapers, and it is much cheaper and simpler to leave the shoes, dirt and with grave tidings, when notes hastily scribbled in the Lords or the Commons, were from time to time coming in to confirm or disturb-perhaps even to annul-former reckonings; and theso, besides, were the hours when-on questions newly obtruding, yet so closely, so impor-tunately present that they would have to be spring up sudden essays, invectives and arguments which only strong power of brain with met before sunrise-he somehow must cause to all, at the door. It is very curious to go to the Syrian schoole houses and see the piles of shoes at the door. There are new, bright red shoes and old, tattered shors, and kob kots and black shoes. and semetimes yellow shoes. The kob kobs are wooden clogs, made to raise the feet out of the mul and water, having a little strap over the toe to keep it on the foot. You will often see little boys and girls running down steps and paved streets on these dangerous kob-kobs. Sometimes they slip, and then down they go on their noses, and the kob kobs fly off and go ratiling over the stones, and little Ali or Yusef, or whatever his name is, begins to shou!, apply for Hostetter's Almanac for 1831.

"Ya Imme! ya Imme!" ("Oh, my mother!") and cries just like little children to other countries.

But the funniest part is to see the boys when they come out of school and try to find their shoes, There will be fifty boys, and, of course, a hundred shors, all mixed together in one pite. When school is out the boys make a rush for the door. The comes the tug of war. A dozen boys are standing and shuffling on the pile of shoes, looking down, kicking away the other shoes, running their toes into their own, stumbling over the kob kobs, and then making a dash to get out of the crowd.

Sometimes shins will be kicked, and hair pulled, and tarbooshes thrown off, and a great screening follow, which will only case when the teacher comes with "Asia," or a stick, and quells the riot. That pile of shoes will have to answer for a good many school boys fights and bruised noses and hard feelings in Syria. You will wonder how they can tell their own shoes. So do I, And the boys often wear off each other's shoes by mistake or on purpose, and then you will see Selim running with one shoe on and one of Ibrahim's in his hand, shouting and cursing Ibrahim's father and grandfather until he gets back his lust property. - The Women of the Arabs.

In 1872, there were two negros confined in jail badly sflicted with Syphilis. In my official expectity I employed O. T. Swift, to cure them under a contract, "no cure no pay." He administered his, "Syphilitic Specific," and in a few weeks I felt bound to pay him out of the county treasury, as he had effected a complete and radiocal cure.
